Section 5: Statement of Reasons for Designation

Design and Physical Value

50 Victoria Avenue North has design and physical value as an excellent and representative example of a mid-nineteenth century jail constructed in the Romanesque Revival style. This style, which was widely used in public buildings, including correctional facilities, across North America in the mid- to late-nineteenth century, is characterized by its use of heavy masonry including rough faced stone, rounded arches, deep window and door openings, compact and block plans, and a massive and imposing appearance. The former jail includes many of these key features, including its bands of large round arched windows on the west elevation and recessed central entrance. The property is representative of the use of this style in correctional facilities in Ontario in the mid-nineteenth century. It is also unique as the primary correctional facility in the former Victoria County and the largest historic jail in the municipality.

Historical and Associative Value

50 Victoria Avenue North has historical and associated value as the former Victoria County jail. Constructed in 1863, the building was designed by noted Toronto architecture William G. Storm whose firm, Cumberland and Storm, was one of the most prominent architectural firms in nineteenth century Ontario and designed a significant number of institutional buildings, including jails, throughout the province. The building was constructed when Victoria County separated from Peterborough County to become its own municipality and the new jail was intended to bring the judicial centre of the county into Lindsay, as opposed to Peterborough. The building served continuously as a correctional facility until 2003 with the construction of the Central East Correctional Facility. It yields information regarding the history of criminal justice and incarceration in both the former Town of Lindsay and Victoria County as well as the role of Lindsay more broadly as a regional administrative centre beginning in the mid-nineteenth century.

Contextual Value

50 Victoria Avenue North has contextual value as a local landmark. The jail is known and recognized throughout the community as the former provincial jail. It is situated at a prominent location at the intersection of Victoria Avenue North and Colborne Street West. The property is historically and visually linked to its surroundings on the block which contain the former Victoria County Courthouse, now used as the City of Kawartha Lakes City Hall, and the former Land Registry Office. These three buildings formed a key administrative and legal centre in the former Victoria County and retain their visual coherence through their historic architectural forms and continued use as important community institutions.

Section 6: Heritage Attributes

The Reasons for Designation include the following heritage attributes and apply to all elevations, unless otherwise specified, and the roof including: all façades, entrances, windows, chimneys, and trim, together with construction materials of wood, brick, stone, stucco, concrete, plaster parging, metal, glazing, their related building techniques and landscape features.
