Section 3: Legal Description

Section 5: Statement of Reasons for Designation

Design and Physical Value

797 Martins Road has design and physical value as a representative example of a rural Anglican church built in the Gothic Revival style and cemetery landscape. Constructed in 1876, the church displays typical features of a Gothic Revival church constructed in the late nineteenth century, despite its small size and rural location. These include its steeply pitched gable roof, distinct chancel, group of lancet windows on the east elevation and a side entrance porch. The church is demonstrative of trends in Anglican architecture throughout the nineteenth century which favoured a specific interpretation of the Gothic Revival style, distinct from their Catholic and Dissenting counterparts. As a cultural heritage landscape, the property is representative of a rural church cemetery from the second half of the nineteenth century where the burial pattern evolved organically around the place of worship.

Historical and Associative Value

797 Martins Road has historical and associative value in its association with the history and development of the settlement of Bury's Green. The community arose as a scattered agricultural settlement straddling the border of Somerville and Verulam Townships, beginning around 1860, and the property of John Fell who became its postmaster. In particular, it has direct associations with the Lamb family who both donated the land for the church and attended it and with Fell himself who became Reeve of Somerville Township, Warden of Victoria County and Member of Provincial Parliament for Victoria North in the second half of the nineteenth century, and who attended this church as a longstanding member of the Church of England. It yields information regarding community and religious life in Bury's Green and the surrounding rural area in the second half of the nineteenth century and into the twentieth.

Contextual Value

797 Martins Road has contextual value as an important local landmark in Bury's Green. The church, which is placed in a prominent position along Martins Road is recognized in the wider community as the local Anglican church and associated cemetery. At the same time, the property maintains and supports the rural character of Bury's Green as one of its churches and cemeteries and is historically linked to its surroundings as part of the historic landscape of the community of Bury's Green and one of its surviving institutional buildings.

The Reasons for Designation include the following heritage attributes and apply to all elevations, unless otherwise specified, and the roof including: all façades, entrances, windows, chimneys, and trim, together with construction materials of wood, brick, stone, stucco, concrete, plaster parging, metal, glazing, their related building techniques and landscape features.
